HISTORY

Wallis Simpson and Prince of Wales, Edward VIII

Learn about the love story which reshaped the monarchy

Documentary £12

Learn about Burrough Court & The Bower House, the place where the love between Wallis Simpson and Edward VIII first blossomed. In the 1930s, amidst the grandeur of this historic country estate, a chance meeting during an elegant reception ignited a love affair that would forever alter the course of British royal history. Their forbidden love led to Edward's heart-wrenching abdication in 1936, choosing Wallis over his royal duty. This act of devotion paved the way for his brother, Albert, to become King George VI, reshaping the future of the monarchy and setting the stage for Queen Elizabeth II's reign. The "Bower House Documentary" unveils the secluded haven where Wallis and Edward sought refuge during their meetings at Burrough Court. Nestled away from the prying eyes of the public and the press, the Bower House provided a backdrop for their blossoming romance and played host to pivotal moments in their love story. For those intrigued by Royal romances and hidden tales, this is a must watch documentary.
